Summary: A poem about Tobias' last diying moments...

Never Again

Never Again Never Again
>  The moon shining down on me,
 The face over mine;
> Reminds me of things, I will not live to see.
> I see images of the futer,
 As well of the past.
> Filling my head,
 Till it explodes.
 The falling of a species,
> the rise of another.
> Battle's we've fought.
 With all our strength.
> For one reason or another,
 We all fought.
 And the next one-
> The next one i will not see.
> Please, Rachel.
 Don't cry for me.
 Don't feel bad or have pity,
> Because I have lost.
 Just remember me always.
> Fight for what I lost.
> Tonight in these woods,  in this cool evening air.
> A soul will be laid to rest.
> Another will be born.
> Soon i will die.
 The battle will end.
> And I will fight--
 Never Again.
 Never again will i hear the screams,
> Nor will I feel the pain.
> Because I will die.
> And laying here,  in this cool night air.
> Her face over mine.
 Filled with dispair.
 She leans close to me,
> and kisses my head.
 "It'll be ok," She tells me.
 I laugh very little.
> Yet what strength it takes up.
 "It's ok, I know." I reply.
> "I know i will die"
> I'm getting weaker now.
 Her hand in mine.
> I squeese it weakly.
> "Good bye, Tobias."
 And she kisses my cheek.

 "Good bye, Rachel"
> I gather up my strength,
 The little I have.
> "I will always be with you in spirit.
 There to show you the way.
> We will...meet..."
> "Tobias! Don't go!"
 She almost cried out.
 "...Again..."
 I glanced around me.
> I see the others.
 Sanding there.
> I see a tear in Jake's eye.
> I look up into her eyes.
 The warm icy blue.
 "Goodbye, Rachel."
 I squeese her hand,
> as tight as i can.
> And with my last diying strength.
 I say but three words.
> "I....love.....you..."
